Culture and Institutions in Economic History

Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München

Summer term 2015

Faculty

Prof. Davide Cantoni; email: cantoni@lmu.de.

Office hours: Fridays, 11:00 (please sign up in advance). Other good chances to talk: after classes.

Teaching assistant: Daphne Alvarez Villa; email: daphne.alvarez@econ.lmu.de.

Meeting times and locations

Lectures:

- Fridays, 12:00–14:00 (c.t.). Room: Geschwister-Scholl-Platz 1, Room M 110.

Lectures will begin in the second week of the term (April 24)

Recitation sections:

- Wednesdays, 16:00–18:00 (c.t.) Room: Geschwister-Scholl-Platz 1, Room M 010; or
- Wednesdays, 18:00–20:00 (c.t.) Room: Geschwister-Scholl-Platz 1, Room M 010.

Sections begin in the third week of the term (April 29). In the first three weeks, recitation sections will provide a concise summary of the econometrics background needed for this class. They are thus recommended also for the students choosing the 3 ETCS option (see below).

Credits

90 minutes' exam, 6 ECTS points. Final exam will take place in lieu of the last lecture of the term, July 17, 2015. Location tba.

Alternatively, the course can be attended for 3 ETCS credit points. In this case, the final exam will last 60 minutes and cover only the contents discussed in lectures (not the recitation sections). We still recommend attending the first recitation sections of the term if you are uncertain about your econometrics background.

Course Overview

This course aims to explain the very long run trends in economic history. The two main questions that underlie the classes will be: (1) why are our societies so much more productive/rich than our ancestors' ones? and (2) why are there such large differences in income levels across societies today? In particular, this class will try to understand how differences in institutions and in culture can help understanding diverging patterns of economic development across the world: between European countries, between the "Western" world and the former colonies, between North and South America etc...

This course is complementary, but does not build on the course "Geographie und Technologie in der Wirtschaftsgeschichte," which is offered in the winter term.

Course prerequisites

It is expected that you have completed the compulsory sequence of economics classes in the economics (BSc) major; in particular, you should have a solid background in econometrics (equivalent to successful attendance of Empirische Ökonomie I and II) and in macroeconomics. This is a course that is not generally suitable for economics minors (Nebenfachstudenten) unless they meet these prerequisites.

(Tentative) Syllabus

Week 2 (April 24): Introduction; definition of institutions.

Week 3 (May 1): holiday, no meeting.

Weeks 4–5 (May 8, May 15): Medieval institutions: trade, guilds, legal systems, free cities.

Weeks 5–6 (May 22, May 29): European institutions in the early modern period: merchant classes and representation, Atlantic trade, the French Revolution, end of the Ancien Régime.

Weeks 7–9 (June 5, June 12): Colonial institutions: elites, geographic endowments, exploitation and slavery, inclusive institutions, Neo-Europes.

Week 10 (June 19): Religion: Protestantism, the Weber hypothesis, human capital.

Weeks 11–13 (June 26, July 3, July 10): Culture: definition; trust, social capital, gender roles.

Week 14 (July 17): final exam.

Literature

Books

There is no required textbook for this class. All lectures will be based on research papers (see below). A very readable introduction to the topic of institutions, and thus a highly recommended reading, is the following book:

- Acemoglu, Daron and James A. Robinson (2012). Why Nations Fail. New York: Crown.

Papers

These papers (and likely more) will be the basis for the lectures. The papers will be posted on the course website (on LSF) before classes.
